"Back in Prison-Why?" by DONALD LOWRIE

WEAK WILL DRAGS HIM BACK TO GOLDCELL

Liquor and a Girl Aid in Sending Victim to Downfall

Back in prison after nearly fourteen years of freedom, Donald Lowrie, wanderer "Ally" and he shudders as he hears the tap, tap of banners driving with into the plain warden's office of a convict whose hand he had clasped twenty minutes earlier. While still depressed with the thought "men are worse than beasts," he is visited by President Oliver, the man who had urged the writing of his earlier book, "My Life in Prison." Oliver asked him to tell why he was back in a cell. "Not for gambles," said Oliver. "You don't count; none of us do, individuals; but there ought to be a moral in it, especially if you will lay bare your innermost secrets and analyze yourself truly." And so, sitting in the rear of the life-giving prison, a victim of his own weakness and slowly during of tuberculosis, Donald Lowrie tells of the road of sin and shame which led him to a felon's cell. His first step was in going to a party with a friend. He meets a girl, Edith, who is strongly attracted to her. He quarrels with her, but they make up and Lowrie drinks heavily. He then meets "Edith," a San Francisco society girl who seeks his company.

CHAPTER VI
ARIZONA STATE PENITENTIARY, Florence, Ariz.
April 27.—After we were seated, facing one another across the rather narrow table, Edith suggested that I touch the button for the waiter.

He appeared, almost as if by magic, discreetly tapping before he parted the heavy dark red curtains that shut us off from the hallway.

"Let's start with a Martini," she suggested, "and then I'm going to have a salad."

I nodded to the waiter, and he silently departed.

"Listen, Mister Man," smiled my companion. "Please don't use my name here. It's all right, only—well, do you? You don't mind, do you?"

"All sorts of people come here, you know. It's very interesting. That's why I like it. But the Wasp and another awful weekly have a man or woman reporter come about here and the other restaurants all the time. What they don't hear, I can remember. So will Mr. Edith."

DRINKS—AND NO NECESSITY TO HURRY
"All right, Edith," I replied. "I shall wait until you are ready to start."

"So do I," she said. "But we can have another before lunch, you know. You're not in any hurry, are you?"

"Hurry?" I questioned. "How could I? This is—well, isn't it?"

The drink came, and with lunch we had a bottle of sparkling Burgundy. I was having the time of my life, growing listless and more and more complacent and satisfied every moment when it suddenly occurred to me that I had only a dollar or so with me. The thought of the coming heavy suit and heavy coat.

The girl, about sixteen years old, had been shot three times. Her body, burned beyond recognition, was found at the side of a small road along a highway. An empty regulation gasoline can about a mile away.

A little powder box, some wires of dark brown hair, a string of beads, a pair of torned-out spectacles and a watch detached from the wrist of the victim's arm are the only clues which it is hoped to solve the mystery.

The homicide of automobile tires was suddenly off the road to the discovery of the body.

BIG SHAKEUP IN SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

Koussevitsky to Replace Some With Imports From Europe

The ground that he intends to make the Boston symphony orchestra in the world's greatest orchestra in the world.

The pieces of several veteran musicians who have secured their positions with the symphony will be filled by European artists imported by Koussevitsky.

One of those who is going to leave because of the shakeup is George Loney, eldest, with the orchestra for twenty years. He has resigned to return to his old home in France.

Some musicians who were discharged were given two weeks' notice on April 12, at which time the resignation of several was accepted. The majority have already completed plans to affiliate themselves with other musical organizations next season.

OBJECTED TO SMOKING.

Trouble is said to have started at the second rehearsal over which the new Russian conductor presided and to have increased as the season went on.

Smoking of pipes and cigarettes on the stage at Symphony Hall during "breaching-spells" of that rehearsal brought the first outburst of indignation from Koussevitsky.

Another rift came when, on November 11, he ordered the playing of an encore during a concert. This was in response to prolonged applause for "The Flight of the Hummingbird," a scherzo from "The Sultan" by Rimsky-Korsakov. While the playing of it occupied only a few minutes the protest of the players over the breaking of a time-honored custom of "No encores" took a storm.

MANY DEFENDERS.

In the heated discussion that followed Koussevitsky had many defenders among the temperamental musicians—indeed, those who were loudest in criticism of his incident were the first to concede his great ability and his devotion to his work.

"Koussevitsky soon made it understood he was 'against' and that his word was law. And the players, bowing to his will, gave him their best. The improvement in the general work of the orchestra was noticeable by a great wave of common interest."

Since Koussevitsky had been in charge since the death of his predecessor at the head of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The fact also discovered that he had a daring contempt for custom and tradition. It is said he put players whose names had been written on the program where other conductors had placed in metronomic pace, and made phrases stand out that heretofore had been but humble parts of the structure.

ADMIT HIS GENIUS.

"In short they discovered in this man great musical genius, the all admit."

But underneath calm and stoical exterior, signs of dissatisfaction burst out.

And then the wrath of Koussevitsky was displayed.

He told the public an extremely hard-working and selfless conductor, he became a slave to his own master.

During consideration of the orchestra was reorganized in national French or German terms for all artists.

Eventually a committee of 150 citizens, named upon the conductors and the trustees, it is understood, the players felt that before the new season started, many changes would be effected by the conductor-for an alleged change in the orchestra was reorganized in national French or German terms for all artists.

They would give weeks notice of such action. Each of the players' contracts and, therefore, the most important of decisions would be made by the failure of the trustees to offer new contracts for next season.

The discussion was amiable and it was finally agreed that, in the event of change being made, ample notice would be given.

ON 1 WEEK'S NOTICE.

So, in keeping with the agreement, the trustees notified on Friday, April 17, two weeks' notice of dismissal for 12 veteran members of the orchestra.

The trustees, Judge Frederick E. Feltz, Ernest J. Feltz, M. A. A. Wolf House, John Elliott, Louis Arthur Lyons, Henry E. Lyons, John Lyons, Theodore W. Western and E. Schor, which were in an apparent group with conductor Koussevitsky's troupe, or if they were not, they failed to interfere in the case of the orchestra's dismissal.

Some of the "strange" and "unusual" aspects of the incident are the musicians which they gathered at Symphony Hall for rehearsal last week.

Not many of the players were named out with notice. While the orchestra received as high as $200 weekly, other musicians are as low as $100 weekly for the regular Symphony season, and no more than $100 weekly for the "Pops" season of ten weeks.

THE PENSION FUND.

There is the pension fund, which draws from a fund of approximately $100,000 which has been accumulated by the orchestra since its organization in 1914. The average musician has about $100 yearly per man and the maximum yearly pension amount is $100, but only for those of long years of service.

At its home, No. 122 Pond Street, Jamaica Plain, Conductor Koussevitsky said through an interpreter to Boston Evening American reporter in answer to a question as to why he discharged members of the orchestra.

LEADERS' ATTITUDE.

"These men have been dismissed because it was necessary to require them with better men. I have no personal feeling in the matter. I intend to bring new artists here from European orchestras to fill the place of the old ones. There will have to be pay those men good salaries but they will be worth every cent paid."

"The artists dismissed ought to have no difficulty in getting places in other organizations. That is my sincere hope. They are able musicians."

"Example I must have. It was a tremendous shock to my sense of the orchestra when I entered Symphony Hall for my first rehearsal and the artists standing upon chairs and playing."

"But I must smile. I think more than 90 per cent of the Boston orchestra agree I am right in this situation."

BACKED BY TRUSTEES.

And now in the midst of the storm of the orchestra's dismissal, the trustees of the orchestra, which they gathered at Symphony Hall for rehearsal last week.

CHORON'S TESTIMONY.

All indicate the widespread interest in her plight.

The fight for the girl's life is in the center about the testimony of one man—Chorone, 211, and for the first time in the history of the state courts an effort will be made to get the corner from the witness stand.

Mass. Macri's attorney, Joseph Kolesky, concludes that the corner is in his original investigation of the case, exceeded his authority, and was not bound by his client at the local jail.

Together they went over the story of the killing as originally told to Chorone by Miss Macri. Kolesky said:

"I intend to fight on a new principle of law—the right of authorities to submit a prisoner to examination immediately after arrest."

"In Miss Macri's case, she was hysterical when examined by the coroner and police. What she may have said cannot be held against her."

The New Haven authorities questioned her for three days before she was released. She was released to her parents at No. 44 Tremont street, on a charge of non-support.

TWO POLICEMEN TRIED AFTER TAXI CRASH

Two Boston patrolmen went before a departmental trial today on charges growing out of a mishap in South Boston a few nights ago.

Joseph O'Garra, who lives at No. 183 I Street, South Boston, and is attached to the Mattapan station, was charged with being drunk while in uniform. Robert Fitzgerald, of the City Point station, was charged with neglect of duty.

The prosecutor alleged that on the night in question one of the City Point station drivers was hit by a taxi cab owned by O'Garra.

In the driver were Patrolmen Fitzgerald, Coughlin and Barrett. Coughlin and Barrett testified today that the man in the cab was O'Garra and that he was intoxicated.

They continued, explaining, they would be taken to the station, but Fitzgerald let him go.

In his own defense Fitzgerald said that man in uniform in the taxi cab was not drunk and he had no authority to arrest him.

O'Garra denied that he was the man in the cab. He said he spent a night evening on the night in question at the home of a relative in Dorchester. Five witnesses appeared to support his alibi.

He was taken under arrest.

ADULTHOOD'S OWN STORY OF THE LIFE OF A RICH GIRL

Gould Heiress Tells the Intimate Details of Life of Rich

By EDITH GOULD WAINWRIGHT
Daughter of George J. Gould and Granddaughter of Jay Gould

WHEN Carroll Wainwright came to visit us at Georgetown, N. Y., in September, 1919, he was a handsome and one-half years old. He was by far the best looking boy I had ever met. More than six feet tall, with ash yellow hair, gray eyes and a pink and white complexion, hidden by tan in the summer, he was indeed very handsome, and still is.

The youngest of his family, with three older brothers, he was never permitted to grow conceited about his appearance and undoubtedly was not aware, at the time of which I write, that at least two girls in Easthampton and three in New York were "crazy" about him.

Carroll's business and lack of worldliness soon won my parents, Mamma declaring that she wished more young men were as unsophisticated as he. We decided that because of our youth we would keep our engagement secret, knowing that our ages alone would cause our parents to withhold their consent to our marriage.

Vivian and her husband, Lord Deedes, were visiting us for the first time in many years and Mamma was much preoccupied with them. It was then that I noticed for the first time that Papa's health seemed to be failing. He gave up strenuous sports like squash and court tennis and took up golf, a game that was later to prove fatal to Mamma, who took up the game at the same time and became proficient at it.

On the termination of Carroll's visit I prepared to return to No. 857 Fifth Avenue to begin my senior year at Miss Spence's School. Carroll and I managed to see each other frequently in the following autumn and winter. He would come to the house for tea or we would go to a moving picture theatre, accompanied by one of the governesses.

I learned that he had enlisted to fight for his country when he was only seventeen. Leaving his college preparatory school, he went to the Brooklyn Navy Yard and joined the Navy.

Morris and Joseph Diamond and John Parins, all of Brooklyn, are to be executed on Thursday night for the same crime unless they are granted reprieve.

It was charged that Pantano, a former clerk in the bank, gave the Diamond and Parins information as to the movements of the bank messengers which made the robbery possible.

CHURCH FOLK PLEAD FOR MRS. PROVAN

ASK COURT FREE MRS. PROVAN

Maine Church Folk Plead for Brookline Woman Shot in Raid on Camp

On the eve of the trial of Mrs. Harold M. Provan, wife of the Brookline dentist, charged with a serious offense in a Maine camp, a petition was forwarded today to Cumberland County Prosecutor Ralph M. Ingalls of Maine asking that he not press the charge against her.

On the petition appeared the signatures of the two dozen natives of Lambie Hill, near Naples, Me., the village where is located the camp in which Mrs. Provan was shot by Larry A. Morgan of Allston, who was indicted with her.

Morgan is now serving a sentence of from four to eight years in the Maine State Prison for assault with intent to kill.

ASSAULT WITNESSED

With Mrs. Provan will be tried Lawrence McKee, of Gloucester, when the case goes before the May term of the Cumberland County Superior Court.

McKee is alleged to have been in the Lambie Hills, Naples, Conn. with Mrs. Provan when Morgan ambushed them on a road near the edge of night and fired in the dark, wounding Mrs. Provan.

In turn Morgan was shot in the back by Captain Frank Wright of Boston, skipper of the State police boat, who also was a guest in the camp of Mrs. Provan's uncle, Stewart Hall, a Civil War veteran.

Mrs. Provan, wife of Dr. Walter Parfitt Provan, dentist of Brookline, and McKee, 33-year-old marine sergeant, were indicted last January on a statutory charge that the trial was put over until May after being set for March.

PLEA BY CHURCH FOLK

Since Morgan's sentence in State Prison Mrs. Provan has made several trips to Naples, Me., to visit her uncle and returned from one trip only last week.

The petition, circulated by Mrs. M. Brown, prominent churchwoman of Lambie Hills, sets forth as one reason for a full trial of the Provan charge that the woman is her uncle's benefactor and contributes largely to the aged man's support.

Providence, April 27.—Alexander C. Melroe, 28 years old, son of William H. Melroe, prominent insurance man and banker of this city, was burned to death in his father's home in Coventry when denatured alcohol he was sealing exploded from a lighted match.

Drenched in flaming alcohol, Melroe rushed into the dining room in the house, and rolled himself in a rug, but was unable to extinguish the flames.

Both parents were painfully burned in going to their son's assistance, and Earl H. Dane, Jr., son of Earl H. Dane of this city, was burned on both hands.

The dress of Florida Melroe, mother of the victim, was drenched and she extinguished it and summoned the fire department. Her brother was dead when they arrived. Besides his parents and sister he leaves a widow and three daughters and a brother, R. L. Melroe of Providence.

Prepared to Prove Peary "Did Not Reach Pole"

Quincy, April 27.—Catharine Joseph E. Bernier, veteran Arctic explorer, and today he was prepared to produce proofs of his assertion that Oswald's claim was such as to make it highly improbable for Ross-Vincent Explorer Peary, E. & N., to make such definitely accurate observation to verify his claim that he discovered the North Pole in 1909.

David Annand, in the 1924 diary's opinion, is the only man living who can testify to the truth of the claim. He expressed the hope that Annand would make the discovery of his expedition and that step which he gets within some miles of it.

Keep The Home Brands Burning

Keep New England
Cigar Industry
on the map!

“Good Work and Pride In It”

THE spirit of the old colonial shoemakers of Boston, "Good work and pride in it" is still alive; it is the spirit of New England's cigar industry today.

Over fifty thousand people are dependent upon New England's cigar industry. Eighty million dollars are invested with an annual payroll of over eight million dollars. In 1924 New England cigar manufacturers paid to the United States treasury nearly six million dollars for import duty and stamp taxes alone.

New England cigars, hand made by highly paid skilled workmen, from the choicest Havana and Sumatra tobaccos, cost more to manufacture but are sold at retail at the same price as ordinary cigars of inferior quality and workmanship.

If you live in New England and are interested in her welfare, HELP to keep New England's cigar industry in New England. BUY NEW ENGLAND-MADE CIGARS.

ALLEGES BIG PROFITS

MADE IN BROADCASTING

New York, April 27—Radio broad-stations are not the charity of the people, as some people would have you believe.
The Radio Artists' Association of New York, which has been in existence for some time, has just announced that it has received a large sum of money from the sale of its records.
The association has been in existence for some time and has been successful in its efforts to secure a fair share of the profits made in the broadcasting industry.

SPARROW'S NEST WAS

CAUSE OF RADIO TROUBLE

An English sparrow that insisted on building a nest in a small fuse box on a radio power circuit in a room at the Hotel New York, with the result that the radio set was broken up for several weeks over an area of many square miles.
This came to light recently when trouble shooters of the light and power company, who have been looking for the interference for weeks, were attracted to a fuse box while using a portable loop receiving set.

POOR RECEPTION FROM

FAR AWAY STATION

Reception conditions were valueless for distance work. For those who didn't care to sit up until morning, Pittsburgh was about the farthest available station. Local reception was ideal, although WBZ was affected by static in my section.
